Since we introduced our FirstBank Monthly Income Plan a few months ago, our customers have been extremely pleased with it. And no wonder. It's the trouble-free way to guarantee yourself additional monthly income, without eating into the money you invest.

Here's how it works: for a minimum $5,000 you deposit; you'll receive an interest cheque for $36.98* every month for the next 5 years. To increase the amount of monthly interest you receive, you can deposit more than $5,000. For instance, you can deposit $6,000 and receive $44.38* a month; $10,000 to receive $73.96* a month; $17,000 to receive $125.73* a. month, and so on.

Or, if you prefer, we can automatically deposit the monthly interest payment into the account of your choice, and if it is a savings account you will earn additional interest.

The FrestBank Monthly Income Plan is, available from 2 months to 6 years. The interest rate applicable to the term you choose is guaranteed for the full term.

Oil Emergency Sharing Agreed

By MURREY MARDER

WASHINGTON (WP) - An agreement in principle for emergency sharing of oil from all sources if there is a new threat to supplies has been reached by the major oil-con-suming nations.

Much of the chaos, and the four-fold explosion of prices, caused by the Arab oil embargo last winter, could have been avoided by such an agreement, a U.S. state department official said.

Twelve nations now have reached "substantial agreement" at a senior official level "on the basis on which the group would act in the event of a new oil interrup-tion," said Thomas Enders, assistant secretary of state for economic and business af-

IN UCLUELET

The theft of a small floor safe containing $16,000 cash from the B.C. Packers fish plant office in Ucluelet early Sunday has left police high and dry looking for suspects.

"Frankly we have no suspects right now." a RCMP spokesman in Ucluelet said today. "To make matters worse there was a number of transients in the area at the time."

The 200-pound safe contained 5½ bundles of $20 bills ($11,000 worth), and one bundle of $50 bills ($5,000). The money was for fishermen bringing their catches to the plant.
Police said they have the serial numbers for the $50 bills.

Further Assurance Needed

Since the provincial government has moved into Victoria's harbor-front development on so decisive a scale, a good deal of responsibility now rests on provincial officials not only to direct development positively in the best visual, economic and social interests of the city, but also to deter proposals which would detract from these aspects. When Mr. Rod Clack in his recent waterfront report expressed doubts regarding the planned Laurel Point hotel-apartment complex at the entrance to the Inner Harbor, he was only giving prominence to reservations which numerous Victorians have entertained on this score.

Much has been made of the provision of a strip of park along the water edge to which the public will have access, and this is a pleasant feature of the plan. It is undeniable, however, that such amenities, so closely adjacent to large-scale buildings, really belong to the structure and its inhabitants rather than to visiting pedestrians. In other words, provision of the park strip will benefit the complex as much, if not more, than the occasional promenader.

The point is that enjoyment of this feature should not distract attention from the main structures on the site, and the architect's views so far provided suggest that the hotel-apartment centre could loom as a very large mass on the city's marine doorstep. Mr. Clack rightly gives weight to the westward view from the city as one of its most attractive natural assets the southward view of the Olympics has virtually disappeared behind the curtain of James Bay highrises - and he is concerned that too massive a construction at Laurel Point would seriously detract from the westward scene.

When designing a setting of any kind, whether it be costume jewelery or a city block, the factors of scale and harmony are among the most important considerations. Before the current project has proceeded too far - and it has gone far already - there should be a final look at the plans to ensure that a lasting error of design shall not be made. The promoting company is trying to make reasonable provision for the scenic effects of the work and its conformity with the existing harbor environment, but there appear to be aspects of height and mass which require still further revision in favor of the public interest.

The provincial government, which under various regimes has always been concerned to modify the proportions of development in order to protect the Legislative buildings and the Causeway, is now apparently using its powers even more directly in freezing some areas and planning others. The Laurel Point question is therefore in the provincial jurisdiction. This, and other harbor-front matters, should be given some public clarification very soon. At present the whole process appears to have entered limbo.

cannot be accused of shyness when ... it comes to debating contentious issues. Recently the mayor was in favor of legalized gambling at the Pacific National Exhibition. Last week he was telling a conference of Canadian mayors in Edmonton, that Canada has enough people and the government should tighten up outmoded immigration policies.

British Columbians in general have always held reservations about Ottawa's immigration policies, as shown by this province's discriminatory legislation against Orientals in the first few decades of this century. And Vancouverites in particular have recently been uneasy about Hong Kong money pouring into the city, as well as two spectacular crimes committed in the city's East Indian community. One gets the feeling that Mayor Phillips may be playing to the home folks with his opinionated immigration statements.

While there was little support from other mayors at the conference who trotted out the old bromides that Canada has a responsibility to alleviate over-crowding in the rest of the world, Mayor Phil-

Vancouver Mayor Art Phillips lips raised a delicate point. Canada's immigration policy has always been tacitly weighted in favor of Northern Europeans and Americans. Even the current system involving points for education, health and skills neatly excludes most black and brown people of > Individual Canadians who pride themselves on being free of racial intolerance will elect the lone black person as president of the service club, but how often do we see Indian families mixing with white families at the beach or in restaurants? And what would be the Canadian attitude towards black people if they made up 40 per cent of our urban population?

Like Canadians, Europeans were the epitome of tolerance until thousands of Algerians, Senegalese and Portuguese were brought to large cities to do work the Europeans disdained. Receiving low pay, and none of the advantages of citizenship, the immigrants have become restless and racial incidents. are frequent. The dangers are obvious. Rich and poor, black and white, are largest nation in the world with a population of only slightly more than 23 millions - fold its arms and close its portals to the rest of an over-crowded world? With a population density of only six persons per square mile the answer is also obvious. Mayor Phillips is wrong. No country, especially the rich and affluent ones, can turn their gaze inwards as the world population doubles. At the same time if we opened the gates wide, the social problems and racial tensions might undo all those Christian precepts to which we pay such staunch lip service. Obviously the answer lies in reasonable moderation, in order to serve the best interests of both residents and new-stay afloat, and this is why friends believe the Vice President'will become increasingly cautious in professing the innocence of Richard Nixon.

H Mr. Nixon had taken his first choice last October, the Vice President would be John Connally and the nation would be caught in an agonizing bind of disillusionment. If trueblue Gerald Ford locks himself too tightly to the President's uncertain cause, he may lose his capacity to serve as the light at the end flickering state of the national confidence, would like to see Ford begin the process of gathering around him a firstclass team of administrators, people who could move swiftly into seats of power. They justify this as a prudent precaution, like a warm-up in the bullpen. But it would also be callous and uncharacteristic of the Vice President, whose sense of the appropriate will preclude any behavior that smacks of preparations for the succession.

Constant Loyalty

But political associates, well aware of Ford's determination to reflect, a constant loyalty, were shaken by his reaction to the first impeachment vote of the. House Judiciary Committee. Reiterating his belief in Mr. Nixon's innocence, he expressed disappointment in the six Republicans who voted for impeachment.

This was a statement to which be must have given some prior thought, and it reflected his anxiety to avoid any show of satisfaction at Mr. Nixon's declining fortunes. But it was a bad mistake in terms of the Republicans' urgent need to hang together through the ordeal. There is, as Rep. Robert McClory (R.-Ill.) told the House Judiciary Committee, pleasant way to impeach a President," but it is still possible for the Republicans to avoid a political catastrophe. Party chairman George Bush has been telling party leaders, "We can't afford to-jump on other Republicans or we'll wind up presiding over a minority of a minority.

Ford's shrewdest move through the long winter was to avoid the White House transcripts. He and Sen. Hugh

VICE-PRESIDENT FORD . . prudent caution

He preferred to believe in Mr., Nixon's innocence simply because Mr. Nixon had fold him he was innocent. It was not his role to function as a judge.

But the six Republicans in whom he professed disappointment had read more than 8,000 pages of evidence, listened to hours of tapes, and put their political fates on the line in deference to the rule of law. As one of the six, Rep. William Cohen of Maine, told his constituents on Sunday, "Our loyalty must be to the Constitution, not to the President The Republican party does not stand for burglary or bugging, the buying of silence, or perjury, or the obstruction of

Tolerant Spirit

Ford has succeeded as a party leader by declining to be dogmatic or narrow in his concepts of party loyalty. He showed his tolerant spirit by campaigning in a California primary for the maverick dove, Rep. Pete McCloskey. By talking on Monday to the Urban League, be broke the Nixon-Agnew tradition of snubs to all civil rights organizations. The diversity of his speaking schedule attests his readiness to be friendly with all kinds of groups.

So he is not likely to start drawing lines within his own party. He plans to keep travelling and speaking during the coming weeks, so there may be more gaffes. He is not going to lobby old friends on the most crucial vote of their careers or accentuate the scars that will be left from the impeachment votes. As a leader who never forced House issues to a loyalty showdown, he cannot afford to start on this one, whatever the pressures from the White House.

There is no precedent for the behavior of a Vice President during the impeachment of a President. But Gerald Ford's solid instincts are a virtue that will keep alive his potential as a healing force, despite occasional ships of the

An Anchor in the French Sea

OTTAWA - Federal Tories are not likely to get very far in Quebec unless they and their colleagues can succeed in their attempt to launch, a provincial party which will represent conservative opinion, whatever it may be.

Some of this opinion is represented in the House of Commons through the Social Credit members whose conservatism more significant than whatever attachments they may have to the economic theories of their movement. A little of it is represented by three Conservative members. Even taken together that is sparse representation for a segment of Quebec opinion that is a long way from being negligible.

The conservative segment of opinion is even less adequately represented pro-vincially now that the National Union has disappeared than it is federally.

No doubt many conservatives voted for the Liberals in the last provincial election as the most effective means of rejecting the separatist position of the Parti Quebecois. Political developments of this sort, like the huge Bourassa majority that resulted, are normally unstable, however, and soon break down.

Near Vacuums

The Conservatives are, therefore, looking at near vacuums which filling. Presumably, they will be filled in one way or another. At least in principle, the Tories have as much reason to look on the present Quebec situation, provincially and federally, as a moment of opportunity as of an occasion for despair.

That is clearly what has brought He ward Grafftey, the Tory from Brome Missisquoi, to his present call for the termation of a provincial party. The fact that the call has come from the party's lone English-speaking MP from Quebec will probably cause some lifted eyebrows, but he has some reason to feel that it is better coming from him than

If there is a risk, it is that a new right-of-centre party might at the moment pick up primarily English-speaking backlash against Bill 22. If that were to happen, the Conservatives probably would be worse off than ever but there are a couple of semi-safeguards in the situation. One is simply time and the . other the inevitability with which governments backed by huge majorities be-

Unless politics unfold in a very strange and improbable way during the next couple of years, English opponents of Bill 22 will not be the only dissatisfied people from whom some new Conservative group could expect support.

Part of the Conservative problem nationally has been the party's long non-involvement in Québec affairs, which left them with both an inadequate feel for the province and without an adequate organization. This was not a state, of affairs that they created by choice, but it one that has proven inordinately dif ficult for them to correct.

When Maurice Duplessis formed the Union Nationale in 1936 from the old Conservative party and Liberals fed up with the Taschereau government, one incidental consequence was to cut the federal Tories off from any Quebec base. Under Duplessis, the Union Nationale to provincial autonomy. Its nationalism certainly was no less under Daniel Johnson. In federal elections, Conservative candidates could get organizational help from the UN and often did but the philo sophic differences were likely to be great enough to make these alliances uneasy. With the collapse of the UN, the Conservatives were left without even this sup-

The nationalism of the UN made interchange between provincial and federal politics more difficult than Conservatives would find-it, for instance, in Ontario, and this seems to have contributed to the evident difficulties federal Tories have had in developing an understanding of French Canada.

Two Solitudes

The two solitudes were particularly real for them. A feel for the province would have been more likely to develop if the federal party had paid attention to ts own organization in the province, but this field was long neglected.

Even if Grafftey and his friends succeed in bringing a provincial Conservative party into existence, the Tories have no reason for complacency. Their weakness in Quebec has lasted through most of this century. More than half of their federal members now come from west of Ontario at a time when the basic East-West tensions within the party have gone unresolved for years.

There is indecision in the party, not so much on the question of whether there should be a leadership convention, but on its timing. At the present time, no possible leader has a clear edge over his like ly rivals. The need to choose a new leader is coming too soon for the conve nience of one possible candidate. Peter Lougheed of Alberta.

The Conservative party's problems are not going to be solved in any quick or easy fashion. Its members face hard work in whatever direction they look. But unless they can reduce their weakness in Quebec, all their other efforts to serve the country as a viable alternative to the Liberal party will compromised and will be more likely

Some Confusion

Now that we have the illusion of stable government securely in prospect and the scintillating spectacle of the scramof Canada should take a hard look at the state of economics: i.e., how payments are justified from federal coffers to pro-

There is some confusion about the larger ones. They are equalization and rental payments. The underlying effect of these payments is inflationary, that is, a major contributing factor.

The rental portion is for the provincial revenue taken over in wartime and all provinces receive them. The equalization payments are made only to the have-not provinces and the status of Quebec in this case is a have-not.

"So be it" until the public in the other nine provinces wake up. Consider Montreal with its many financial, industrial and government offices and head offices. There are many wealthy resource and industrial companies in Quebec. Government generated wealth eventually paid by all Canada is fantastic. There is about $100 million outstanding Expo debt. Future projections include hundreds of millions for direct or indirect Olympic expenses with little in return, for naturally, all buildings, etc., will be in Quebec.

Then there is the daddy of them all, the James Bay power project. Imagine if you can the interest on $6 billions foreign

Canada and the United States must take positive, forceful and peaceful steps to reinstate a fair and democratic resolution of this tragedy.-Peter Petropoulos.

Cyprus

The eruption of war on Cyprus was a tragic event and one which could result in greater international crisis if reason and good sense do not prevail.

It was a disappointment to Canadians to learn that NATO-supplied arms were used by Turkey to commit military aggression against Cypriots. This is especially appalling when Turkey used these arms to break a U.N. supervised ceasefire, one which Canada supported both diplomatically and with troops.

Many Canadians, myself included, believe NATO's position in the conflict should be one that upholds freedom rather than a catalyst to its demise. NATO must not become a partisan force selectively favouring only some of its members, in this case Turkey.

One must question the United States and other NATO members for their complacency and failure to assist Greek Cy-

About Parks and People thoughts about a lost career, the one you waited too long to pursue but know. in your heart of hearts, would surely have made you blissful, free, and excellent. I wanted to spend my life in the national parks, for instance.

I saw a job in the parks as a yearround, paid vacation, with deep spiritual benefits thrown in as a bonus. I'd be Grey Owl with tenure. In this other career of mine, the wind sighs in the pines, the icy pure rivers rattle down to the sea and tiny flowers, like stars on the forest floor, glitter where ere I trod.

Alas all I have to do is watch the birdies, count the little beasties, blaze trails, paddle my canoe, and quietly master the arts of wilderness survival. No boss. No red tape. No office backstabbing. No mean people. * "* *

So you can imagine my interest in meeting a man who really has worked in the parks for even longer then I've merely dreamed about it. Here was the very fellow I might have become my-self. The, trouble was, he didn't talk about the wind in the pines at all. He wanted to talk about people:

They are the strangest creatures in the parks. Once, he said, he and his wife were walking in a high, remote corner of a western park and suddenly they heard the hysterical weeping of a baby. In that place, the noise was astounding. The baby was in a field, in a basket, utterly alone. The country was rich in grizzly bears, and the parents had driven to town for a few beers.

Then there's the matter of noise. Overnight campgrounds, on hot summer nights, often offer about as much protection from human din as a New Yorksteen seems and you can prove be York tenement - and you can never be sure that some aging husband and wife, in search of supreme peace near shining waters, will not find themselves bedded down beside a gaggle of beerdrinking teenagers, complete with gui-tars, transistor radios, furious horse-play and raucous lust to see the dawn.

Here's one reason why Canadians were kept warm last winter.

An important reason for this happy result was that the oil industry was able to react quickly to sudden and drastic changes in the supplies of heating oil in parts of Canada.

As a case in point, Texaco promptly increased to maximum our capacity to make fuel oil in order to supply the looming shortage in Eastern Canada. We increased our fuel oil storage capacity at Halifax. Then we chartered extra tankers to move crude oil into the Montreal area through the seaway. 35 jumbo tank cars were added to improve distribution of products in Eastern Canada. And to further make sure that sufficient supplies would be available, we shipped crude oil from Vancouver through the Panama Canal to our eastern Canadian refineries.

Don't think for a moment that the above example is intended to create the impression that Texaco alone averted what could have been a crisis. We have used our own experience to illustrate the situation. The fact is, the oil industry reacted in this fashion, to avert what was shaping up as a severe fuel oil shortage for many Canadians.

Right now we are thinking about future winters—that's why we decided to proceed now with our new 400 million dollar refinery in Ontario. Without it central Canada would soon be seriously short of refining capacity. This 400 million dollar investment is equal to more than seven times our 1973 earnings! When an oil company earns a profit, that's how most of it is used—it's "plowed back" into the business to make sure that you continue to be well served.

The oil industry in Canada was born and raised in an environment of competitive enterprise, and the record shows that we have done a good job. The question that bothers us, and we hope it concerns you too, is that we need this kind of 'no-meddling' environment to continue to grow. Because if we're going to meet Canada's future needs, we must grow. To do that we need adequate profits which provide a fair return on investment. The oil industry lives, or dies, on these economic realities because they in turn attract the enormous amounts of private 'risk' capital needed for exploration and development. Today these needs are greater than ever, and without this type of investment capital, Canadians will risk lack of development to provide their future energy needs.

The oil industry has come this far on its own. We know that in the future we can continue to meet Canada's energy needs...but we're going to need understanding from you—and co-operation from our governments.

Strikers Still Defiant Despite Defections

By The Associated Press National Football League owners and players, each group saying it is as resolute as ever, were to return to the bargaining table today in another effort to end the 37-dayold players' strike.

The NFL Players Association—apparently shaken by a of veterans flowing into camp, including recently arrived star quarterbacks
Bob Griese of Miami Dolphins, Terry Bradshaw of Pittsburgh Steelers and John Hadl of Los Angeles Rams—says it is standing fast and defections are slight.

Owners, faced by meagre attendance during the first weekend of exhibition games, say the financial losses will have no outward effect on their stance in contract dealings with the players' union.

Attendance also was down
Monday when 35,521, some 31,695 fewer than the opening crowd last season, saw Kansas City Chiefs defeat Detroit Lions 20-12 in an exhibi-

The players' so-called freedom demands have been at the heart of the football hassle since the two parties began negotiations March 16.

The union wants, among other things, elimination of the reserve and option clauses, a limit on the authority of commissioner Pete Ro-zelle and veto power for veterans on trades and waivers. The owners have said they

VICTORIA STARS FALL

VANCOUVER - Burnaby Auroras lost their provincial title and chances of retaining the Canadian championship after an uphill struggle that included elimination of Victoria All Stars at the B.C. Senior Amateur Baseball tournament

Metro League No. 1 All-Stars won the tourney and the right to enter the national championship starting Thursday in North Battleford, Sask., by beating Aurora 3-2 in their third tournament meeting. On Sunday, Metro downed Auroras 3-1 but the Burnaby club bounced back by ousting Victoria, 18-12. Auroras then forced an extra game by beating Metro, 3-1.

Victoria lost its opening game 4-0 to Metro but stayed alive with a 2-0 win over Cowichan and a 3-2 decision over "Metro No. 2 Saturday.

COWICHAN BAY - Two players — Tony Simnett and John Nichol — won two titles each when the fourth annual "Old 'Crocks" tennis tour-nament ended Monday at the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis

Simnett, who entered only two events, got lots of pace on the grass courts with his service and volley in the last two sets to come from behand for a 1-6, 6-3, 6-4 win over Nichol in the junior veterans' singles final.

Simnett later combined with Nichol to down Howard Tooby and Derek Wild 6-3, 6-3 in the men's doubles final.

Kathy Metcalfe won the women's singles, nipping Sue Gray of Cowichan 6-4, 6-7, 7-5 in the final. But the best, match of the tournament was Mrs. Gray's thrilling semi-final win over Pat Nichol on a third-set tiebreaker.

Nichol picked up his second title when he combined with wife, Pat. to romp home in the mixed doubles.

The Trouble Is Greed: As Mr. Webster Sees It

It may just be, like it or not, that the most influential man in this province today is a loud-mouth Scot described by one friend as "resembling a rather pudgy panda bear" and by another, after watching him on a television show when he'd neglected a needed haircut, as "looking like Golda Meir

Beauty contests he doesn't win and he's described himself sardonically as "just a bag of wind passing in the night," by now, at 55, Jack Webster seems at the height of his powers as a probing, opinionated, tireless, well-informed re-

Radio station CJOR gives him something in excess of $100,000 a year to hold the largest-ever morning audience. Leaders of government, labor, business and the church, not less than the private muck-raker or axe-grinder, seek him out to endure the questioning of "the mouth that roared," known ing it's the one guaranteed way to make their views known. His week-day program makes headlines regularly. His own opinions make life-long friends or life-long enemies.

So, last week, when Webster was on holiday in Victoria here to play the Oak Bay course (though his game was well below the standard that's earned him two holes-in-one) I trudged around after him to see what makes John Edgar many people take home ideas for granted. They believe that every window should have draperies, that matching tables belong on each side of a sofa, and that sofas and chairs must wear identical fabrics, all of which are cliches:

Instead, if you try new ideas, your home has a fresh, "withit" look that identifies you as a person of today.

Such a departure from the ordinary is this handsome window, designed by Carole Eichen. Bookcases were to be installed on the wall, between two windows, and the wall was to be panelled. Rather than put the panelling against the wall, it was brought forward six inches, and an opening, just the size of the window, left. This created a sleeve, or pocket, for the edges of the curtain, which, in any normal situation, bangs from above the window to the sill. This curtain hangs six inches below the sill, and several inches out on each side, to be sure that the panelling hides all edges and truly frames the fabric. A 1" \times 6" travels the width of the panelling seven inches below the window sill, sealing off the excess space underneath and eliminating a dust catcher.

The twelve inches of panelling on each side of the window completely clear. However, these open weave fishnet curtains let in plenty of light and air and will be pulled back only at window cleaning time. A one-inch molding around the opening finishes off the edge most. opening finishes off the edge nicely

Seven years later, in early 1956, Mrs. Malloy was pregnant with Marilyn. The spotting returned, and Dr. Huston (since deceased) prescribed DES again to stave off nature's threatened abortion.

Marilyn was born on Christ. mas Day, 1956 — one month premature and weighing only five pounds but otherwise apparent good health.

The Malloys lived a full and mobile life, settling in the Virginia suburb of Washing-ton after Malloy retired as a navy captain and entered the signs about either Patti or Marilyn — girls born after Mrs. Malloy had taken DES. NEW YORK (AP) - Those funny little lines on cans of peas, soup and other grocery items are the signal for a new marketing technique that store officials in the United States say will save money and time for shoppers and the industry. Consumers aren't sure how well it will work.

Supermarkets, are just starting to try the system on a limited basis. It's called the Universal Product Code and and computer, designed to speed things up at the checkout counter and reduce human errors.

The Marsh Store at Sherwood Shopping Centre in Troy, Ohio, has been using the code system since June 28 and spokesman Steve- Overmyer said that initial reaction has been "just fantastic." He conceded that there were but nothing like the problems

About 1,700 manufacturers with annual grocery sales of $69 billion, are planning to implement the system. They're members of a trade association called the Uniform Grocery Product Code Council.

Here's how the system works: the different-sized lines are imprinted on a can or box by the manufacturer. A spokesman for Distribution Codes Inc. of Washington, D.C., which developed the system, explained that the chine readable symbol linear Some of the lines stand for Consumer opposition stems from industry plans to eliminate price tags on individual items entirely. The price would be posted on the shelf.

gon have been doctoring their reports to Washington on cease-fire violations and waning government security South Vietnam South Vietnam, a senate Foreign Relations committee staff study charged Monday,

The Senate report cited "substantial deletions" in the reports from the U.S. Consul Generals in South Vietnam's four military regions to screen out adverse news in the embassy's reporting to Washington

Committee staff members Richard Moose and Charles Meissner compared the texts of the field reports with the final embassy dispatches transmitted to the state department in Washington.

The staff members told the Senate committee that on the basis of their investigation in Vietnam from May 12 to June 4 the long-standing tendency of the U.S. Embassy in Saigon toward "close identification with the policies of the South Vietnamese Government and selective reporting" are still apparent today.

The study said that the pattern of reporting from the Sai-gon embassy, which is headed by Ambassador Graham Martin, was to minimize South Vietnamese cease-fire violations but also, in some cases, to play up military successes of the Saigon forces.

In still other cases, Moose and Meissner asserted, the embassy downplayed field re-ports of weakening government authority in regions of Vietnam and in local "accomgovernment forces and Viet-

Crocus-Like Colchicum Heralds Fall Season

Colchicum is not only a gracefully lovely flower of late summer but a symbol which summarizes the possibilities of the coming fall and winter garden.

In appearance resembling a most handsome crocus, the colchicum is in no way related to that little flower for it is a true bulb (not a corm like the crocus) of the Lily Family,

We speak of colchicums now in early August for this is about the only chance we have to move the bulbs for it is a our gardens if we already have a stock of them. If we have none and want some, it may be the end of this month before dealers have them for sale. Experience teaches them that few gardeners will think of planting anything at all during July and August. Regardless of how desirable it may be for the plant, few gardeners can be persuaded of the necessity.

Colchicums have big wide leaves rising directly from the bulb scales. Ten to 12 inches long and five inches across they appear in spring, remain until June to feed the bulbs. They then die down, leaving flowers to emerge without benefit of

The pinkish-mauve of the most commonly seen Colchi-The pinkish-mauve of the most commonly seen coloni-cum autumnale appear overnight in the last days of August if those days are gool. Otherwise I have known them to wait until September. Through the dry soil the flower, enclosed in a pointed white sheath, thrusts its way upward not gradually but literally overnight. One day nothing showing on the bare soil; in the morning, goblets spread in the sunshine.

Once you have a half dozen colchicum bulbs you find they multiply by offsets. Seeds are also a means of propagation Each flowering-size bulb is about an inch and a half through with a flat base and a pointed top — resembling slightly a tulip bulb with its dark brown glossy tunic. Full size, it can be as large as a small fist.

The quiet beauty of these colchicums is their charm. They are true late summer-early fall flowers; they can be a prelude to many quietly beautiful plants easily grown here in our gardens and flowering in fall and winter.

Colchicums have an almost fairly-like quality, perhaps because they come without forewarning of leaves or buds. After the flambuoyance of summer with its heat and hot colors, fall is on its way—a delightful time for thinking, feeling, and just being a part of the changing seasons; no sharp divisions, but gentle transition periods.

Colchicums belong to the period of gentle transition into fall. Look for them late this month. They make roots after blooming — it will then be too late to plant.

When today's deal came up in a rubber-bridge game, our South declarer was defeated at his small slam contract. In the post-mortem analysis, it his fifth heart into a winner. was revealed that top-echelon play would have brought the contract home safely.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

North's jump to four spades, was a conventional call. It announced (1) fewer than 6 high-card points, (2) four or more trumps, and (3) no voids or singletons.

After cashing the diamond After casning the diamond king. West led the ace of diamonds, which South ruffed. Declarer then played the ace and king of trumps, and followed up by leading the ace and king of hearts. When East discarded a club on the sec-ond heart lead, declarer be-came doomed to defeat. Although he could ruff out two of his three remaining hearts West could not be prevented from making a heart trick with his queen.

Declarer was unlucky in running into a 5-1 division of the outstanding hearts. Had they been divided either 3-3 or 4-2, he would have fulfilled his contract as he played it. Nevertheless, his play was not

'CAMPERS' GET DAILY FLEA CHECK

ARKVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A new resort opened this summer in the hundreds of others in the Catskill and the hundreds of northern. New York state.

But Campo Lindo—Beautiful Field — is a resort with a difference: Its a summer camp for dogs whose owners want to get them out of the stifling city or give Man's Best Friend a treat while Dog's Best Friend goes off on his own vacation.

I couldn't find anywhere but a stuffy boarding kennel to put my own two when I had to go off on a business trip, explained owner Ron de Strulle of Manhattan. So I bought this place and opened the camp.

More Ocean To Cover

An additional 60,000 square miles of the Pacific Ocean has been added to the juris-diction of the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre at CFB Esquimalt.

The addition was made on the recommendation of the International Civilian Aviation Organization conference, held in Hawaii last September.

The centre's area of respon-sibility for search and rescue operations now covers approximately 690,000 square miles of land and 265,000 square miles of sea, extending from the Alberta-British Columbia boundary to roughly 700 miles out to sea from Cape Flattery on the south, to the Northwest Territories, Yukon Territory and the Arctic on the north. The seaward boundary extends some 300 miles to the west of Prince

'It makes no difference in the resources at hand for off-shore search and rescue operations," Rear - Admiral R. J. Pickford, commander of maritime forces Pacific, said.

The worst drought to hit the U.S. since the 1930s is showing no signs of weakening and officials fear disaster for farmers and ranchers and sumers.

Rep. William Scherle, (Rep.-Iowa) said Monday that if the drought is not broken soon, Congress will have to pass emergency legislation to provide beleagured farmers

"Certainly these steps would be mandatory to fore-stall a catastrophic depres-sion which would wrench our nation from its economic shores," Scherle told a farmer's group in Colombia, Mo.

Already the drought has cost farmers an ranchers more than $9 billion in crop and livestock losses.

Nebraska reports $2.36 billion in losses, Kansas and Texas each report $2 billion in losses, Iowa claims losses of $1.6 billion, Illinois more than $1 billion and Ohio more than $300 million.

Oklahoma Gov. David Hall Monday asked that 35 coun-ties in the western and southern part of his state be declared drought disaster areas and said that, unless rain comes soon, all 77 counties in the state may be included in a disaster aid request.

Hall's press secretary, Ed Hardy, said farmers and ranchers in Oklahoma have been hard hit.

"It's wishful thinking on the part of some to believe the drought isn't going to have the effect of over-all production it will have:" said Iowa Agriculture Secretary Robert Lounsberry.

Lounsberry, however, said Butz was right in seeking to prevent panic and keeping commodity speculators from creating a false market.

Nebraska Gov. J. J. Exon also said Butz would have to be misinformed to think that the drought would not affect

The ence here is the prelude to a general shuffle of the world's political strategic and economic maps.

Sources close to the conference participants say the movement to gain control of ocean resources is similar to the 19th century colonial push by European nations into Afri-ca and Asia as the industrial era was getting under way.

The colonial era is over, but technological progress will now enable man to exploit the resources of the sea, which covers 70 per cent of the total area of the globe.

The Caracas conference is probably the first international gathering to have opened its doors to science fiction. Many ways of exploit-ing the sea undreamed of a few years ago have now be-come possible — and beyond the dry legal texts that will perhaps constitute the jus-tification of this conference, participants see the gleam of immense riches, to which all think they have the right.

That is precisely the difficulty in the discussion of basic issues here — such as

'Impeach' Tidal Wave As Nixon Confesses

WASHINGTON-The bottom has fallen out of any effort to save President Nixon from impeachment after his confession Monday that he had been involved in the Watergate cover-up for nine months before he previously had insisted he was aware of it.

House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill (D-Mass.) said a "tidal wave is going against the president" and predicted there would be no more than 75 votes cast against impeachment by the 435-member vote for impeachment after the president admitted that he had withheld relevant infor-mation from the House Judiciinquiry and had misled it.

The edginess in the finan wendering about companies public utilities and banks — it extends to countries. weeks ago rumors swept Wall Street that the Government of Japan might face serious fi-nancial problems comparable to those bedeviling Italy.

A failure of a business firm in Japan underscored that country's enormous oil debt and growing balance of pay-ments problem. Although anx-icties about Japan have cooled somewhat, Japanese banks have to-pay a premium-over New York rates to borrow money, which is the mar-ket's way of saying that the risk is greater these days in Another evidence of the same trend is the reluctance of purchasers of large certificates of deposit to place fund in small and medium-sized banks. Thus, big banks in New York and Chicago have lately been flooded with money, while those outside of the two major money centres have been losing CD funds.

While losses in foreign exchange speculation have hit many other banks here and atbroad, the underlying problem for the U.S. banking system runs much deeper. tem runs much deeper.

In a nutshell, many banks appear to have over-extended themselves in a search for growing business and profits during the past few years, spurred on by assurance that with money relatively easy they could borrow new funds without trouble.

If money was easy to bor-row, it was easy to lend, but the end result, as credit availability tightens, is that many of the loans now on the books of banks may be of questionable quality.

Figures just published by Dun and Brandstreet for May show the dollar level of U.S. bankruptcies at an all-time high. "There'll be another new record for June," one observer in New York said.

Although rumors are a dime dozen in New York, no one a dozen in New York, no one professes to know of a specific bank or company that may be alogarits doors.

"That's the cerie thing about it," says a money market expert. 'It's like being in a hurricane: you know that something is going to happen. But you also know that most will survive."

Rockefeller made the point that "loan losses in the bankoff a chain reaction. Or if the ring system have increased in Italians actually go bankrupt, recent months and years, and institutions all over the world that is undesirable and needs

It may just be, like it or not, that the most influential man in this province today is a loud-mouth Scot described by one friend as "resembling a rather pudgy panda bear" and by another, after watching him on a television show when he'd neglected a needed haircut, as "looking like Golda Meir

Beauty contests he doesn't win and he's described himself sardonically as "just a bag of wind passing in the night," by now, at 55; Jack Webster seems at the height of his powers as a probing, opinionated, tireless, well-informed re-

Radio station CJOR gives him something in excess of $100,000 a year to hold the largest-ever morning audience. Leaders of government, labor, business and the church, no less than the private muck-raker or axe-grinder, seek him out to endure the questioning of "the mouth that roared," knowing it's the one guaranteed way to make their views known. His week-day program makes headlines regularly. His own opinions make life-long friends or life-long enemies.

So, last week, when Webster was on holiday in Victoria here to play the Oak Bay course (though his game was well below the standard that's earned him two holes-in-one) I trudged around after him to see what makes John Edgar Jack's open-line program often sounds like one long lament. People phone in, one after the other, to belly-ache about food prices, mortgage interest rates, rental regulations, the effects of inflation. Was this flood of discontent a new phenomena?

"No, I don't think it's new, "Webster said. "A program like mine is part public therapy, part Court of Last Resort. That kind of call is the wail of desperate people who've got to tell somebody something of their troubles. It's good for their souls though not necessarily good for mine."

"But how much public discontent can we stand without a complete social upheaval? There was a professor on one of your shows who was predicting the end of the monetary system as we know it. I got the impression that you were agree-

Canada. But he was only pointing out the obvious, that the old days of imperial colonialism, of class societies, are heading out the window. Television has done a lot in that directions of the colonialism of class societies, are heading out the window. tion. What I see on a screen in India, or in Inuvik, I wan now. The money system, the doctrine of supply and demand may not give it to me, but I still want it. Look at the Arabs. They finally got off their knees after being cheated for years by cheap oil exports and expensive, manufactured imports. Now they can buy the world. Sure, the system as we know it,

"But here in Canada we're still living high off the hog even if we don't know it.

"I think the average Canadian measures how high he's living off the hog by the man next door," Webster replied. 'There's great bitterness, for example, when we see plumbers getting $11 an hour while an old age pensioner gets by on $222 a month. It's heart-breaking any time I have a labor leader on who's trying to justify his union's demands, or a strike. I know for sure that the next call will be from some old-time unionist retired on a pittance who can't understand the greed of his successor. That's the kind of comparison we make in Canada. As for the rest of the world — forget it!"

"Does that lead to a cynicism about political solutions to our problems? Have we the same sort of skepticism about our leadership that the Americans have had since Water-Webster: "Not so much cynicism, I'd say, as negatavism. Time and again, during the last election, my callers expressed their disgust for all parties and all leaders. They can't see the difference between them. It seemed to me that people just sighed — and voted. I don't think we've that backlash of skepticism that followed Watergate, but I'm convinced now that it could happen here.

"Are you, yourself, pessimistic about political solutions to what ails us?"

"It makes me boil with fury at the thorough incompetence of government bureaucracy — all governments," Webster said. "Why, my God, the way governments are now even the secretaries' secretaries have secretaries. God help the orditally disturbed woman invade my office. By chance a top government official of the provincial health department was there. Matter of fact, it was Dennis Cocke, He quickly or-dered a health team to attend to the problem. Three trained social workers arrived. They talked to this poor soul for about 90 minutes and then they prepared to go, leaving the woman in my studio. I caught them in time and made them take the poor woman with them. What they did after that, God knows. Probably left her on the street. That's my complaint. Nobody does anything. Nobody takes responsi-

"You said earlier that the belly-aching wasn't a new thing," I said, "but now your program is concerned many days with illegal strikes, violence in the streets, rip-offs by large corporations. Surely you're aware of tremendous change in our way of life?"

"It's all part of the same syndrome," Webster replied.
"Cupidity. Greed. Crass materialism. The I'm-all-right-Jack philosophy. The phoney free enterprise way of life that "Are you saying that people are badly informed or ig-

"Not really. I think probably about 20 per cent of Canadians are better informed on world and national affairs then they ever were before. But world crises or national crises have become so endemic that I feel a majority 'turn off' from world or national problems or want bland, simple solutions

"What do you see as the greatest evil in our social and economic system?

"Socially, it would have to be the spread in the use of hard drugs," Webster said. "I'm quite violent on the tragic toll of death and misery caused by organized crime. British Columbia is as bad as New York or Los Angeles. Yet nobody, from Trudeau down, gives a damn. Economically I worry most over the eventual collapse of the so-called democratic system under its own weight of selfishness and by the vast, smothering octopus of government bureaucracy."

"I find it odd that the only philosophy to which you seem to have a formal allegiance is the Committee for an Independent Canada. Are you, in fact, anti-American?

Webster: "I joined the Committee because it was the first group to express a proud nationalism without falling into the raving anti-Yank camp, Any appearance of anti-Americanism about me is because of legitimate reporting on the American take-over of our universities and, to some extent, our civil service."

"What would be your own priorities if you were Prime Minister of Canada?"

"Well," said Webster, "I'd give the country a national, bilingual educational system. I'd ensure national control of our resources. I'd attempt to prevent the Balkanization if not the outright separation of the country by the 10 provincial potentates we've elected as premiers. I'd try to run this country particular as a country." nationally as a country.

Impeach 'Tidal Wave' s Nixon Confesses

WASHINGTON-The bottom has fallen out of any effort to save President Nixon from impeachment after his confession Monday that he had been involved in the Watergate cover-up for nine months before he previously had insisted he was aware of it.

House Majority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill (D-Mass.) said a "tidal wave is going against the president" and predicted there would be no more than 75 votes cast against impeachment by the 435-member vote for impeachment after ary Committee impeachment inquiry and had misirgit. Rep. Charles E. Wagins (R.

Calif.), a leading defender of the president on the Judicary Committee, said Nixon should resign or be im-peached.

The wave of reaction fol-lowed Nixon's release Monday of a statement and new tape transcripts disclosing that he:

Gave orders within a week after Watergate that the Central Intelligence Agency be used to blunt an FBI investigation that threatened to expose the fact his campaign aides channelled money to the burglars.

Was tohi six days after the break-in that his campaign director and former at-torney-general, John Mitchell, Withheld evidence from his closest advisers and lawyers as well as the House Representatives Judiciar committee, and made erron ous statements to the public.

This was a serious act of omission for which I take full responsibility amt which I deeply regret, Nixon said in the written statement Acknowledging that his im-
